

A groma helped Romans make roads of the right angles

Roman
citizens built
the roads

Roads were curved for the water to run off

Roads helped Romans transport
their goods

Some Roman
roads are still used today

The roads were a crucial part of Romanising Britain

The Romans
were excellent roadbuilders

The Romans didn't quite manage to build 50,000
miles of road

Before AD 43,
Britain had no
proper roads

Roman roads were laid across Britannia linking forts and towns

The Romans
were excellent
roadbuilders

Most Roman roads were curved around corners

Straight roads helped keep the soldiers safe

Strong bridges
were built across rivers and valleys
